Privacy Policy

At Envisage Law, your privacy is important to us.

We collect your personal information when you willingly provide it to us. This might happen when signing up for an e-mail list or when contacting us. This information is not and will not be shared with anyone other than necessary service providers, unless we conclude it is necessary to comply with applicable laws, at the request of law enforcement, to prevent personal or financial harm, or in connection with the investigation of alleged illegal activity.

We collect anonymous statistical data from visitors to our website. Such data includes the number of visitors and views, a visitor's geographic location (i.e., country), and the different technologies used to access our website. We use this information to measure how our website is being used.

We also use cookies, which are data files that store information to allow our site to recognize whether a certain computer or device has been used to visit it in the past and may enhance your online experience by saving your preferences or information you provide while visiting our site. We collect this information for analytics purposes so we can determine what features interest our users and potentially revise our site features or operation as a result. You can disable cookies using your web browser, though your experience using this website may degrade as a result.

If we revise our privacy policy, we will post revisions to it here.

If you have any questions regarding this privacy policy, you may contact us at the address below.
